First Morning Newspaper in the Amarillo Country. Covers the Panhandle of Texas, Eastern New Mexico, Southern Colorado and Western Oklahoma from twelve to twenty-four hours in advance of Denver, Dallas, Fort Worth, Oklahoma City and other papers carrying telegraphic dispatches.

Entered as second-class matter at the postoffice at Amarillo, Texas, under the act of March 3, 1879.

TOP 'O THE MORNING.

Sugar Trust talk isn't so encouraging during the preserving season.

An elastic conscience and a stretch of imagination frequently go together.

A New Jerseyite is dead as the result of a mosquito-bite. Come to the Panhandle, people.

The Missourian who suicided in a dentist's office evidently preferred to fill a cavity himself.

The happy husband whose wife throws teacups and things in constantly thinking up a new dodge.

That missing letter from "Dick to Dick" might throw considerable light on the Alaskan dicker.

Those also-rans in Georgia have doubtless reached conclusion that it isn't easy to Hoke Smith.

With a threatened ice cream famine Tokpekans are facing the prospect of going short on sundaes.

It seems highly appropriate that the Stokes shooting sensation should be aired before Magistrate Freschi.

It has just been discovered that a Colorado pioneer named it Cripple Creek because the waters were limpid.

St. Louisians will doubtless attach no significance to the fact that The Million Population Club was so long in the air.

A GREATER LAND SHOW EXHIBIT.

Assured of the worth of an exhibit in the Chicago Land Show early this fall, Amarillo through her Chamber of Commerce, has ordered space for a showing of the products of Panhandle soils. This exhibit has been prompted by the one placed last fall, and participated in by various sections of the Plains country. This year arrangements are being made for the taking of twice the space of last season, and there can be no question that the amplitude of products will warrant every step taken to give publicity to this garden spot of the great southwest.

Already Canadian has bespoken in her own behalf for approximately one-fourth of the available space. Other communities will doubtless come forward and ask to be supplied with space in the same line with Canadian and Amarillo. Experts claim that this venture is one perhaps richer in returns than any other individual undertaking to push the Panhandle country into general attention. For this reason, the support of the enterprise should include all communities in the Panhandle.

Although Amarillo's citizens might possibly raise the money for this enterprise without assistance, this course would not be fair to other cities, towns and sections in this portion of the state. When these put their money into the investment they look upon it as a more vital matter. It is this personal interest that is lacking in many of the general movements for the public good, and the same is sought to be overcome by the officers and members of the Chamber of Commerce in connection with the great land show.

Final arrangements looking to the consummation of this deal are in the hands of a committee presided over by J. C. Storm, and it is stated that these are receiving every encouragement to proceed with the tasks in hand. Variety, quality and general and clear demonstration is the need of the vast majority of communities, and arrangements are almost complete to put this on in the form of the land show in the presence of hundreds of thousands of people.

HAS TAFT BEEN GUGGENHEIMED?

The last semi-revelations with regard to the Guggenheims of Alaska are filled with suggestions which tend to implicate no less prominent a personage than President Taft himself, and in the light of the insinuations which have followed such newly acquired information it seems high time that the public were fully informed with regard to the details in the rich northwestern territory which belongs to the American people by right of purchase.

Things have come to a pretty pass, when the president of a great nation and great people must rest under implied charges of abetting and aiding a colossal land-grab, and the full, white light should be turned upon the alleged transactions in order that the nation's chief executive may be cleared from such imputations of corruption and as a matter of justice to the people.

Insinuations and innuendo are different things from facts. And fact is this case is what the people want, and what they have a right to demand in fullest measure without reservation. Certain it is that this nation is afflicted with too much Guggenheim manipulation, and it is equally certain that any man who is proven guilty of aiding such interests in secret opposition to the good of the entire people, however high his position, should be made to answer to the insistent popular inquiry.

If President Taft has been Guggenheims, the public has a right to know it. And it should insist upon such information.

BONDS FOR INVESTMENT.

(New York Tribune.)

The great success of the latest bond sale of the United States government is a cause of satisfaction to the Secretary of the Treasury. Mr. MacVeagh has for some time been advocating the issue of bonds without the circulation privilege, and when congress at last was brought around to that way of thinking he had to determine the rate of interest which would be attractive to investors. To do this required some investigation and consideration, for in more than a generation the United States had not issued bonds for which the demand was not artificially stimulated by the privilege of issuing bank notes based upon them. The treasury department fixed 3 per cent as a rate of interest which would be satisfactory to investors. Its judgment is more than justified by the enormous demand disclosed and the handsome premium received.

The sale is notable in many respects aside from the flattering results achieved. It initiates a new policy of selling bonds for general investment, and its notable success proves the policy to be popular and one that is not likely to be abandoned. The government has now laid aside the financial crutch upon which it felt compelled to lean during the civil war, when the need of a better market for the country's loans than that afforded by the demand of ordinary investors became apparent, and the creation of the new national banking system was taken as an opportunity for providing such a market. Once adopted, the system of borrowing money from national banks in consideration of the privilege accorded to the lenders of circulating their notes has proved hard to abandon. The low rate at which the country has been able to borrow under this plan and the popularity of the national circulation, the freedom of which from the uncertainties that characterized the old "wildcat" state bank notes was commonly ascribed to the fact that the national bank notes were based upon government bonds, together contributed for many years to keep the government from issuing such bonds as Mr. MacVeagh has just put forth. The defects of the bond-secured currency have at length been perceived, and this new step of issuing bonds without the circulation privilege marks a change in the public attitude. It means that the country is approaching the time when a new and more sensible currency system will be adopted.
